Dear Applicant,

Many thanks for your interest in the Programme Coordinator position for our Youth Violence Intervention Programme (YVIP) at Homerton Hospital in Hackney. We launched our service in Homerton Hospital in July 2018, and it has been exciting to see the difference we are able to make to both vulnerable young people and the hospital teams. Our work was featured on BBC News which gives a taster of what we do.

We are looking for an enthusiastic individual who is highly organised, enjoys collecting and reporting on data, and has the ability to form effective working relationships with a wide range of people.

In this application pack, you will find a job description with a person specification and the terms and conditions of the post. Please read through the person specification carefully as we will be shortlisting applications using these criteria. Make sure you tell us why you want to work for Redthread in your supporting statement.

You will find a copy of our application form and equalities monitoring form on our website at <http://www.redthread.org.uk/join-the-team/> Please send your completed application form and equalities monitoring form to applications@redthread.org.uk.

We will accept applications until 10am on Monday 3 June. Interviews will be held in London at Homerton Hospital on Monday 10 June.

Kind regards,

YOUTH VIOLENCE INTERVENTION PROGRAMME

Redthread empowers young people to thrive as they navigate the challenging transition to adulthood by integrating trauma-informed youth work into the health sector. Whether a young person has been the victim of a stabbing, is seeking support for anxiety, has suffered a sexual assault, or wants to find a new home beyond the reach of a gang, we support them to overcome the challenges they face through our dynamic youth work programmes.

Every year thousands of young people find themselves in hospital A&E departments as the victim of serious youth violence. Redthread's Youth Violence Intervention Programme embeds youth workers in hospitals to intervene with these young people. The teams meet the young patients as soon as they can: in the A&E waiting room, on the ward, or even in the resuscitation bay. We believe that this moment of intense crisis, when the young person is nursing a serious injury in the daunting environment of a busy hospital, often alone, can be a catalyst for pursuing positive change – a 'teachable moment'.

Our teams build rapport with the young people, mentor and advise them, and support them to make long-term positive plans to break away from cycles of violence and offending. Problems include exclusion from education, employment or training, a lack of stability in housing, mental health concerns, unstable relationships and reprimands due to criminal activity. Redthread capitalise on our partnerships to ensure long-term work and change is possible for each young person. The teams make well-judged referrals on their behalf, and accompany them to initial meetings to ensure transition is smooth. This work disrupts the cycle that can too easily lead to devastated communities and an exhausted healthcare and justice system.

The programme is well established at London's four Major Trauma Centres. These hospitals care for emergency patients with the most serious injuries and each covers a quadrant of London. This means in a city of 8.5 million people, we work with whoever needs our support when they are in crisis. We were recently featured in a BBC News report.

"I need this don't I, this is an opportunity for me; to be able to work with you, any of you, could change things for me. I'm ready for that. I'm in! You don't need to ask me again - I'm 100% on board, whatever I have to do. I'm doing it."

A young person's reaction to being introduced to the service

"Redthread youth workers are doing an incredible job helping young victims to move away from the circles that led to them getting hurt"

Sadiq Khan, Mayor of London, July 2016
